

Interim Process Update

When I wrote the initial design brief, I did not organize detailed pages, focusing on the purpose of the application and its functions. Because of this, I had to work on the wireframe first. Also, at the beginning of the work, I thought it would be okay to add images by using HTML instead of designing with Illustrator. However, I thought it would be easier to design the application with illustrator and do HTML, so I started working on the illustration in the middle of the work. Previously, it was not understandable to do design in advance and coding, but I realized the need while doing this task.
